The real challenge was to lift India and Indians out of poverty and building a modern nation with all type of developments. To be aware from all planning point of view A planning commission was set up. This commission helped us to establish industries, creating balance between the various region. This planning commission continued to focus on the development of heavy industries under the state control. It was helping to other economic areas also by planning and providing technical and institutional help. Because of having an aim to walk with other countries in technological development, some basic and essential set up were left behind.

But now when we see India after 70 years then we find that we have achieved a lot. We are still democratic united on which we must be proud. Lot of election have been done successfully. Not only for industrial growth but also we have still appreciated for our religious and social unity. All this has become possible because in our country everybody is getting equal rights to spend the life according to them self. Whether rich or poor or wherever we live, we get or are provided all the basic components of life. So we can say that we have succeeded in achieving goals of Independence.
