SUMMARY

'Flying together' is a story of a flock of geese living together in a tree. One day, one of the wisest geese of the flock saw a vine is growing down the roots of the tree. He told his fellow geese about it and told them to remove the vine. He believed that if the vine grows bigger it might possibly make it easier for hunter to catch them. All the other ignored him and did nothing. Every day vine grew bigger and a hunter saw it and set a net trap to capture all the geese. Next morning the geese didn't realize that they are trapped. After realizing they all regretted for not listening to the wisest geese. The wisest geese thought of a plan. He told all other members to play dead when the hunter arrives so that the hunter would throw them on the ground as they will be no use for him and after the last geese fall on the ground everybody will flew away. Next day the hunter arrived and after seeing those dead he threw them on the ground. The plan worked and all the geese flew together.
