3. MS_Family

A family is a group of persons who are related to each other.

The members of the family live together, share their love and care for each other.

A family can have many members. A few members of the family are great grandparents, grandparents, father, mother, uncles, aunts, children, cousins etc.

There are a lot of similarities or resemblances between the members of the family.

The members of the family may have similar features such as shape of the nose, colour of the skin or eyes etc. Sometimes we can see a resemblance in their habits too.

A few families have their own work or occupation wherein the whole family is involved.

This occupation is even taught to the children of the family. For example: farming, weaving, pottery etc.

Many families have their own customs which are followed by every member of the family, be it the elders or children.

A few family customs are:

Not to wear shoes or slippers inside the house.

Touching the feet of elders.

Family members eating at least one meal together.

Eating with hands and not using spoons or forks.

Women members should take bath first and then cook.

Married women must wear traditional dress and jewelry.

All the members of the family should celebrate festivals together.

A family is called the first school because we learn many things from our family members.

The family members teach us the basic manners, behavior, love and respect, sharing, caring, greeting etc.

The family members also teach the child their family traditions and customs.

8. VC_Family is where life beginsFamily is where life begins and love never ends.

Our first school is our family. Family consists of different members. They all have their own qualities. Some may be always angry, some may sing well, some may be laughing all the time, etc. But we need to understand that to live under one roof we should love each other, support each other and help each other in times of need.

The story of two brothers:

Once there were two brothers who worked together in a cornfield and shared the harvest equally.

One of them was single and the other had a wife and three children.

One night they both thought about how the harvest could be distributed between them.

The elder brother thought, "I have a wife and children to look after my future. But my brother does not have a family. He needs more support."

The younger brother thought, "My elder brother has to feed his entire family with the same amount of harvest. I think I should give him some of my share as well."

Thinking thus, each of them carried a bag of grain for the other in the darkness of the night. This went on until one night they both met on the road. They looked and laughed at each other embarrassed and thanked each other.

Finally they decided to continue their work in the field and promised to help each other in times of need.

Children! Remember that sharing and caring for others is a way of life through which you can always be happy.
